		Expected outcome	A degree in English language and literature is designed to get students reading books, analyzing theories, critiquing prose and verse, and taking a more critical look at the signs and words surrounding us every day. The aim is to get students thinking creatively and analytically about the English language; this differs from other modern language degrees as it is intended for students already proficient in written and spoken English. A course with a focus on English literature typically allows students to study literary texts from throughout history. The programme modules cover a diverse range of literature from different periods. The programme enables students to study and analyze passages, relating texts to their cultural, social, historical and political contexts. An English language-focused degree will train students to analyze the workings of the English language outside of literature, including language-based communication in all kinds of forms and contexts. This could include analysis of casual spoken conversation, text speak, advertising methods or the uses of language in specialized legal and medical discourse.

		Outline of the Syllabus	MA in English Literature offered in the Department of English exposes students to a wide range of writing from British, American, and Anglophone traditions. It helps students explore how writers use the creative resources of language-in fiction, poetry, nonfiction prose, and drama to explore the entire range of human experience. Students are expected to strive, to be imaginative, rhetorically dexterous, and technically proficient and as a result, to gain a deeper insight into life. With the introduction of a new syllabus under CBCS this year, which promotes a new thematic framework where classical Indian literature shares space with contemporary literary crosscurrents, the PG syllabus will help students build skills of analytical and interpretive argument, and become careful and critical readers. Again, students' engagement with various strategies of drafting and revising, style of writing and analytical skills, diagnosing and developing scholarly methodologies, and use of language as		Percentage of SLM developed by In- House Faculty	100

		Outline of the Syllabus	BA English is a three-year undergraduate programme course imparted in regular as well as distance education mode. The course educates students in both the artistry and utility of the English language through the study of literature and other contemporary forms of culture. It provides students with the critical faculties necessary in an academic environment, on the job, and in an increasingly complex, interdependent world. Graduated students will be capable of performing research, analysis, and criticism of literary and cultural texts from different historical periods and genres. It assists students in the development of intellectual flexibility, creativity, and cultural literacy so that they may engage in life-long learning. Students who pursue this course become familiar with representative literary and cultural texts within a significant number of historical, geographical, and cultural contexts. They are able to apply critical and theoretical approaches to the reading and analysis
